

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method and system are disclosed for segmenting a population, and include the defining of a base level population segmentation tree. A set of alternative level variables usable as substitutes in the nodes of the population segmentation tree are defined. Substitute split values for each node of the tree are determined to enable up and down shifting between levels.